Pamela Bauer Mueller

Learning Georgia History through the Novel Form

Pamela, originally from the Pacific Northwest, calls Jekyll Island her home. She has immersed herself in studying history and has written ten books in the past eight years, with several based on local lore. Among those are Neptune's Honor, about the loyal St. Simons Island slave, Neptune Small, and An Angry Drum Echoed, about an American Indian woman. Her most recent novel is about the Jekyll Island Club Hotel, entitled: Splendid Isolation.

Cyberknife offers state-of-the art radiological therapy in the form of 200 tightly tangled radiation beams in doses 100 times more intense than conventional radiation. Used primarily for types of tumors including prostate, lung, brain and subsets of breast cancer, Cyberknife intensifies the dose of radiation using linear acceleration which continuously tracks the tumor for short intense periods of time. In all cases, Cyberknife shortens the radiation therapy period to as few as five days versus conventional radiation which may extend for eight to nine weeks. The intensity of the Cyberknife beam also allows for concentrated organ penetration eliminating possible radiation damage to other organs and tissue. This technology is also being used to successfully remove vertebral spinal lesions and for neurological repair treatments. At an initial cost of 4.1 million dollars per installation, Cyberknife is capable of treating up to 700 patients a year at the Brunswick facility.
